SAMSUN GUIDE

Samsun is a distinctive and important tourism destination which is home to the thousand year cultural heritage of the Anatolia and the Black Sea Region dating from the time of Amazons to the Ottoman Period. With its natural beauties including streams, waterfalls, lakes and forests, its therapeutic thermal springs, its local architecture, its rich cuisine and rousing festivals, Samsun is a place of great interest. Situated in the northernmost part of Anatolia, along the shores of the Black Sea, the Samsun region comprises a fertile land cut through by the deltas of the Kizilirmak and Yeşilirmak rivers. Samsun (ancient Amisos) was founded on a spot known colloquially as the 'Mesopotamia of the Black Sea'. Administratively it is subdivided into the counties of Alacam, Asarcik, Ayvacik, Bafra, Çarsamba, Havza, Kavak, Ladik, Ondokuzmayis, Salipazari, Tekkekoy, Terme, Vezirkopru, Yakakent, İlkadım, Canik and Atakum. The city is a hub for rail, air, sea and road transport systems, with easy links to the cities along the Black Sea coast as well as the central parts of Turkey.

HISTORY

Samsun was one of the important cities of the region which was known as Paphlagonia in antiquity. The earliest settlements in Samsun dates back to the Old Stone Age (Palaeolithic Era) according to the findings from the caves situated to the south of Tekkekoy. Samsun also fostered settlements in the Middle Stone Age (Mesolithic Era) and the New Stone Age (Neolithic Era); and the Dundar Tepe Mound indicates that a civilisation flourished there during the Chalcolithic (Copper) and Bronze ages. The earliest known residents of Samsun were Kaskians as mentioned in Hittite sources.

Following the Kaskians, who are believed to have inhabited the region during the Late Bronze Age, the legendary female warriors, the Amazons, settled in the region near the Terme River around 1200 BC. In the 6th century BC Amisos (Samsun) was founded as a colony by settlers from Milet (Miletus). Afterwards came the Persians, and they were followed by Alexander the Great and his Successors, the Roman and Byzantine Empires, the Danişment Principality and the Anatolian Seljuk Sultanate; all in turn dominated the city.

During the reign of Sultan Mehmet Çelebi it fell under the Ottoman rule. The most important role played by Samsun in recent history was to be chosen as the landing site for Mustafa Kemal Pasha and his close associates on 19 May 1919, at the initiation of the Turkish War of Liberation.

Throughout its long history Samsun has accumulated a rich historical and cultural heritage, from prehistoric cave settlements to the beginning of urbanisation with the Neolithic mounds; and from the splendid Ottoman buildings to the monuments of the early Republican Period.

EATING AND DRINKING

The age-old cultural history of Samsun has endowed it with a rich and varied local cuisine. Corn, cabbage, haricot beans and rice are the main staples in Samsun dishes, and various succulent pastry and meat dishes are there to tempt you. The first dish that comes to mind whenever Samsun is mentioned is the famous 'Samsun Pita'.

It may be covered (as in calzone) in the Bafra style, or open-top, as they make it in Terme; however it's made, Samsun Pita is always luscious. With the salpicon consisting of minced meat, pastrami, spicy sausages, thinly chopped meat or cheese, the pita is indispensable part of Samsun dinner tables.

HANDICRAFTS

Samsun is a centre for linen cloth-making; these linens are used to make harvester shirts, outer wears and clothes. In the mountain villages' woolen fabric-weaving, as well as cotton cloth-weaving, wool knitting and pantalets weaving are among the handicrafts most commonly engaged in. Ondokuzmayis County is renowned for kilim weaving, and around the lakes of Bafra wicker basket-making is still practised.

SHOPPING

Samsun boasts modern shopping centres as well as shops specialising in the sale of authentic local goods and handicrafts. Each year Samsun Advanced Technical School for Girls creates a variety of panels, bed linen and tablecloths, along with sculpture and woodwork, for exhibition and sale.

TRANSPORT

Samsun is accessible by road, rail, air and sea. There are intercity coach services to almost every other city in Turkey, and the international airport is just a quarter of an hour from the city centre. Modern rail services connect the city to eastern, western and southern destinations across the country.
